Part of Christ's very good news for us today is our memory of the recent commemoration of His resurrection and victory over death and the grave. But for those who lived and experienced it, it was indeed the most revolutionary good news. More good news for us today is that from Michæl 5:2 we learn Christ existed from everlasting to everlasting; so He was always One with the Father throughout eternity past. Those who were privileged to see and hear the One who came first to be and to become God have experienced another revolutionary experience.

Every day TV, radio, and newspaper media are begging us to adopt findings of fossils presumed to be millions of years old, of geologic formations that supposedly evolved over hundreds of millions of years, and of stars and merging galaxies that began many billions of years ago. Incredibly, the commentary accompanying all this is always that these findings are but the evolutionary consequences of the universe's big bang some 13 billion years ago. The evolutionary scientists confidently say, 'We can design the evidence to fit it.' But not surprisingly I came out of my university physics training very much convinced it was just as they say, and that the Genesis days of creation were not literal at all, but instead represented everything. Light and cosmic geologic epochs and that life on Earth began in some ancient slimy pool crawling with unknown and unknowable entities that somehow by chance had a special affinity for one another.

Then, as I, Bob Gentry, much later reflected on the contrast of Christ's description of His Genesis Creation, I realized I no longer had any basis for trusting Christ as Creator or Redeemer. Everything was up for grabs, so to speak. I couldn't like that. So, I decided no matter the cost, to conduct my own investigation as to whether the evolution my professors had taught me was truly scientifically factual or instead the greatest hoax and fraud in the history of science. Would it be true or false? I had to know. But what has this to do with Christ's Fingerprints of Creation found in the granites of El Capitan, Mt Rushmore and Pikes's Peak, and thousands of other granites over the world? Just this.

When Christ called the Earth into existence on Day 1 of creation week, He placed tiny, invisible specks of certain types of very rapidly decaying radioactive atoms within these granites and other hard foundations of Earth's crust. Just as light impinging on Polaroid film leaves its imprint without any further developing, so did the rapidly emitted nuclear particles penetrate the rock surrounding the tiny radioactive center and imprint it with microscopic colored spheres that are revealed as rings after the rock is thinly sliced and placed under the microscope. The important thing to understand is that the rock had to be a solid before it would retain the imprint of the particles and produce the colored rings or halos seen in the photo on the accompanying cover of the Fingerprints of Creation DVD. That is, the rock had to be created very rapidly simultaneously with the rapidly decaying atoms because, if the material was initially molten instead of being hard, the rapidly emitted particles would all have disappeared before the rock eventually cooled to a hard rock, and thus no Fingerprints of Instant Creation would ever have developed.

This is the Revolutionary Good News I sought and prayed for. Christ designed His Fingerprints so that no one – evolutionist or otherwise can counterfeit them. This discovery has become a tremendous foothold building experience both for me and for many others who have learned of it through details in my book, Creation's Tiny Mystery, and the DVDs Fingerprints of Creation and The Young Age of the Earth, both of which have been aired on Public Broadcasting in years past, and are still being aired on certain TV satellite networks.

My hope is that it will be the same for at least a few of those who attend on Wednesday evening when I will further explain why I am now being exceptionally fortunate in bringing this discovery to public attention, namely because of the favorable reaction of the worldwide scientific community to follow scientific protocol following my repeated publications over three years in the world's leading scientific journals during my thirteen-year-long Guest Scientist position in the Chemistry Division of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Normally when a scientist publishes a discovery that even slightly challenges an established model or theory – especially a very old model – in whatever field that is being challenged, quickly bring the issue to the center of public attention, and on many occasions even the center of public attention, because it is the nature of the scientific establishment for scientists to enhance their reputations by either confirming or disproving the new result. But in this case the scientific community’s reaction to this discovery has been a deafening silence for over twenty five years. The reason is obvious. I'll speak more about it on Wednesday. In the meantime those who wish to learn more about the Fingerprints of Creation prior to Wednesday may do so by reading my scientific reports and my book, Creation's Tiny Mystery, online at my website www.halos.com. Also on the website are the DVDs referred to above, which are viewed free of charge. Those wanting to obtain personal copies of my book and the DVDs can do so by calling the fulfillment service number, 1-800 - 467-6380.

So, although we won't have time to discuss it Wednesday evening, Christ has also enabled me to discover huge flaws in the popular big bang theory and then to also develop a new cosmic model of the universe that agrees with the Genesis creation account. Some details of all this are given in the Center of the Universe DVD shown here.
